

Advanced Course: Crisis, Recovery and Transitions

Beijing, China, 13–19 October 2013

Introduction

The past decade has seen a sharp increase in the number of countries affected by and recovering from large scale disasters, especially in the Asia Pacific region.

A parallel growth has also occurred in the number of professionals working in the fields of humanitarian assistance, post-crisis recovery and development.

Policymakers and practitioners face a myriad of challenges associated with countries in or emerging from complex emergencies. Yet rarely is there an opportunity to reflect on the critical concepts, practical challenges and policy dilemmas involved in supporting effective transitions.

The Humanitarian Policy Group (HPG) at the Overseas Development Institute (ODI) and the School of Public Policy and Management (SPPM) at Tsinghua University are partnering to offer the second Advanced Course on Crisis, Recovery and Transitions.

The course is supported by the Australia and New Zealand School of Government (ANZSOG) at the University of Canberra, Australia, and the Post-war Reconstruction and Development Unit (PRDU) at the University of York, United Kingdom.

Over one week, this course aims to facilitate learning and guided reflection on these crucial issues and the dynamics professionals are subject to in the Asia Pacific region. Participants will engage in a participatory learning process that combines lectures with small group discussions and exercises, with the possibility of publishing an analytical piece.

Date & logistics

The 2013 Advanced Course will take place from 13-19 October at Tsinghua University, Beijing, China.

Participants are responsible for their own travel to Beijing. On-site costs, including accommodation (full board), are included in the course fee.

Participants

The course is targeted at mid-career and senior professionals with at least seven years' experience in humanitarian assistance, international development, post-crisis recovery, disaster management, foreign policy and/or the military.

Participants come from bilateral and multilateral policymaking and aid financing institutions, foreign ministries, the military, United Nations agencies, NGOs, research centres and private firms, including independent consultants.

Content

The Advanced Course will revolve around five core themes:

- Key concepts: humanitarian action and post-crisis transitions
- International Humanitarian Law, International Disaster Response Law and protecting people in the aftermath of a disaster
- Emergency response in disasters: the role of national, regional and international actors, the private sector and national militaries
- China's emergency management: history, institutions and reform
- The governance of recovery

Leading experts will deliver presentations and lectures, with group discussions facilitated by HPG, SPPM, ANZSOG and PRDU staff.

Assignments are not required of participants. Participants, however, will be encouraged to draft an analytical piece. The strongest papers will be considered for publication in the Humanitarian Exchange (a publication of the Humanitarian Practice Network at ODI).
